Freckles and Blotches
Are Easily Peeled Off

If you are bothered with any cutaneous blemish, it's a poor plan to use paint, powder, or anything to cover it up. Too often this only emphasizes the defect. Besides, it's much easier to remove the disfigurement with ordinary mercolized wax. Applied nightly, the wax will gradually remove freekles, pimples, moth patches, liver spots, sallowness, red blotches, or any surface eruption. The affected cuticle is absorbed, a little each day, until the clear, soft, youthful and beautiful skin beneath is brought wholly to view. Ask the druggist for one ounce of mercolized wax and use this like you use cold cream. Remove in morning with soep and water. Many who have tried this simple, harmless treatment report attonishing results.

However, if there is any doubt about the kind of corned beef you are getting, corn your own beef. Buy a piece of the sort of beef you like—the rack or the rump or the round—and corn it. Make a solution of two gallons of water, two table-spoonfuls of haking soda, an ounce of saltpeter, three pounds of salt, and a pound of sugar—or half that amount— washed clean, a third of a cupful of washed clean, a third of a cupful of many trades, among them that of nurse girl, shop girl, lady's mald, barmaid, and for a time she was one of the number of outcasts of London. At the age of twenty Emma was in great distress. She had had two chil-dren. Rejected by the father of the last one, she was thrown upon the tender percles of a woman who was little more than a pauper herself. In this predica-ment she appealed to young Greville, who had known her, and, attracted again mesan cheese over sliced tomatoes, ripe by her beauty, he set up a modest estab-and firm, and top each slice with a spoonful of mayonnaise dressing.

by her beauty, he set up a modest estab-lishment for her, in which her mother acted as cook and housekeeper. It was here that she attracted the attention of Sir William Hamilton, the uncle of young Greville, and after having taken her to Italy and provided her with all the advantages of an education that had been denied to her previously, he married her and she became Lady Emma Hamilton.

The effect is not generally rapid, but ture, just like the functions of digestion and breathing, and, like all these natural functions, they are best performed when thought least of.

If we are eating an appetizing meal in pleasant surroundings, with cheery company, we are not troubling ourselves much with the process of digestion, and we may oulle safely draw the conclusion that the process of digestion will not trouble us.

If our thoughts are buoyant, uplifted courageous, if we are walking with head courageous, if we are walking with head corect, chest expanded, our breathing is natural, deep, regular—sufficient for all physical needs. We need give it no more thought.

The effect is not generally rapid, but is cumulative in action; that is, the full effect may not be experienced for several days or longer, if small doses are taken, and the result may continue exhaustion follows its use and it has—as far as has been noted—no irritating action on the intestines.
